Miscellany.

FROM THE ALBANY CENTINEL.

"'Tis pleasant, thro' the loop holes of retreat,
"To peep at such a world."

YES, Cowper, I once thought as you did—but, I begin to think those "loop-holes" are like the camera obscura, reflecting a softened shadow, through the dark medium of ignorance, on the pure tables of a benevolent heart. The pleasant prospect which my retreat afforded, induced me to take a nearer view—I abandoned it for the noise and bustle of the world; "I saw the stir of Babel," and felt the crowd; I was in search of happiness and gave neither sleep to my eyes, nor slumber to my eye-lids. At length, fatigued with the fruitless search, sat down to rest—to reflect. Gracious heaven! said I, and are these scenes of tumult, of "wrong and outrage with which the earth is filled," are these the scenes which appeared so pleasant through the loop-holes of retreat? O, give me back to my obscurity. Let me disremember what I have here beheld; let me ramble out my little round of life in that "blest seclusion from a jarring world." The distant prospects once warmed my heart with sweet emotions; and here, perhaps, I may again repose—again, "through the loop-holes of retreat," enjoy the sweet delusion. Simple child! didst thou dream that thy native shades possessed the oblivious charms of Lethe's spring? and, that thou couldest remember to forget that thine eyes have wept to see, and thine heart paused to contemplate? Vain wish! But alas I must ever bear the painful consciousness of the reality of those evils which I hoped were but phantoms of a benighted brain. I can never forgot, that I have seen the modest child of virtue hissed from the stage by the foul fiends, whose turpitude was richly blazoned with the mammon of unrighteousness! I can never forget the triumph of the designing and evil minded, over the honest credulity of innocence and truth. I can never chase from my memory the iron visage of the miser, whom I have seen, unbloshingly, recount his "fair possessions," and snatch the "beggarly last do it" from the mouth of the wretched bondman; I have seen him, with rolls of parchment, and his bailiff, enter the [illegible] heart forget the widow's prayer, and the orphan's tears? But thou wilt never—I have seen the assassin whet his dager, and repair to the forest; I have heard the midnight orgies of the lewd and profane; I have seen, "e'en temperance reel" at the fashionable debauch! I have seen pride and vanity enter the deaceful cottage, and dethrone the rural virtues; I have seen ambition ride forth, and desolate the globe; I have seen,

"——The poor fettered slave on bended knee,
From freedom's sons, imploring to be free."

I have seen the proud man's contumely, the insolence of office, and the frowns which patient merit, of the unworthy takes! I have beheld, too, thy sorrows, Narcisa! I have seen the accursed murderer of female peace—the fell destroyer of unsuspecting innocence and virtue!

"[illegible] rov'd, triumphant in her charms
To bear the diadem of pride away;
Here gallant fraud assail'd her with his arms,
Waken'd her senses and embrac'd his prey.
Touch'd by the barb of grief, the victim fell,
While desperation's minions, rung the virgin knell!
"Ah, luckless nymph! that fascinating breast,
Pure as the whitest of Alpine snows,
Which heav'd at tales of excellence distress'd,
And lost, in other's pangs, its own repose,
Bemoan'd the innovations of decay,
And blaz'd, and wept, and perish'd like the genial day.

All these—yea many, very many more, are the evils which I have seen in my wanderings. And would to God, I could wipe every trace of the melancholy remembrance from my mind, and once more view the world with an eye of charity, from the bowers of ignorance. Reader, mistake not the Wanderer for a misanthrope: He knows full well there is a counterpart—a brighter side to this ungenial picture. But those are no illusive complaints—and evils of such report, require the correcting hand of all who dread their influence. Thou mayest remember too, he pointed to the "ruins, and their sombre shades,"—and where shall we find a scene, so dark and gloomy, as the "sad ruins of the human mind!" To the borders of this trackless waste, I would fain conduct thee. For here too thou hast a freehold; and I beseech thee, friend, by the warm ties of kindred blood, to survey thine own heritage. Pluck up, by the root, the tares and brambles that bring forth not good fruit; and plant the fertile soil with the tree of knowledge, and the seeds of virtue; so shalt thou reap a golden harvest of temporal and eternal felicity.

THE WANDERER.

FROM THE AUGUSTA HERALD,

THE MORALIST.

——The sons of riot flow
Down the loose stream of false enchanted joy
To swift destruction. On the rankled soil
The gaming fury falls: and in one gulf
Of total ruin, honour, virtue, peace
Friends, families, and fortune headlong sunk.

THOMPSON.

By some who may be disposed to think more favorably of such character, I may be censured for having given the picture too high a colouring; but upon a fair developement of their principles it will be found a just one. Compounded then of such base qualities, if I address them I have little to expect from the influence of the mild voice of reason, or the inculcation of the most wholesome precepts of morality: I therefore consign them to the goading stings of guilty conscience, and to the merited punishment of offended justice. But with those yet unversed in the ways of impiety, minds are still unbiased, in whom whose prejudices have not taken root, nor habits warped the natural freedom of the imagination. I indulge a more pleasing hope of proving serviceable: And if I can but rescue one from the vortex of dissipation, it will be to me a most consoling reflection.

In the gay season of youth when the incentives to pleasure are not less powerful than they are numerous;—when strong and vivid passions meet with but feeble opponents in reason and the dictates of conscience, the voice of admonition though generally more unheeded, is yet more necessary. With a judgement unmatured, the mind is apt to imbibe impressions unfavorable to their interests, and yielding to these, they forsake the paths of virtue for the devious ways of vice. Habits now formed generally take deep root:—"They grow with their growth and strengthen with their strength." Hence the evident necessity of their forming such early rules for their conduct as may ensure their future usefulness and respectability.

It would lead me into a lengthy detail was I to enter into a discussion of all the evils which prove the ruin of youth, and render them miserable in old age. Let it suffice to say—that while some vices claim the pre-eminence for enormity, all habits are useless, (if not vicious) that are not profitable. In the proper employment of time much is included. It is wisdom to improve every moment for it can never be recalled. Aurelius has said "we ought to make the most of our minutes;"—incessantly passing away, they leave us fewer to enjoy. And the observation of Seneca is a just one, that "we complain of the shortness of time, but spend it as if we had too much." It is a jewel whose value we seldom know until it is too late. How improper to trifle away that which we ought to prize most highly! How criminal to abuse so precious a gift!

Let me advise you, my young friends, to guard against the inroads of vice: beware of her alluring ways, and view her in her deformity when stripped of her gaudy trappings. Torn from her temptations, and listen not to her syren voice, for it is the voice of danger. As the first grand step to guard you against her bewitching smiles, suffer not yourselves to be idle, for this will inevitably lead to other and worse abuses. Beings who possess a soul cannot possibly complain of a want of employment. Your time should be employed innocently; and by this is meant a strict discharge of all the proper duties of your station. Not made for yourselves alone, the various obligations which you owe to your maker, and to society, require your faithful attention.—Youth more especially is the season for improvement, and every moment as it flies should leave behind it a pleasing reflection. Youth is not rich, in time, it may be poor.

Part with it as with money, sparing pay,
No moment, but in purchase of its worth;
And what is worth, ask death beds, they can tell.

YOUNG.

Indolence and sloth are called vices in the order of nature; and as being the parents of almost every other, they are the most dangerous. Idleness engenders ignorance, and even deprives the person of the knowledge he before may have acquired; the idler is a kind of blank void in the creation,—an useless being in society—Governed by a listness dulness, he saunters from place to place; weary of his time: he gives himself up to the lust of sense, which increasing, produces other evils and makes him enervate; base, cowardly, and despicable—These inevitably prove the destruction of his fortune health & the termination of his existence in wretchedness.

As the power of example is greater than that of precept; let me intreat you to impress it on your minds, that it is of infinite importance you make a judicious choice of your company. Too many are insensibly led astray from the flowery paths of virtue by carelessly associating with the licentious, and aiming to appear, 'clever fellows,' or 'lads of spirit'—From ill air we contract diseases, & from ill company vices and imperfections. The latter are as contagious as the former; more difficult to be cured, and more deleterious in their influence. An early fondness for low company has the most destructive tendency.

By corrupting the morals, and leading the way to scenes of dissipation, riot, and debauchery, the mind becomes enervated, the health impaired, the purse is wasted, and enormities are frequently committed for which the just punishment of the law is indicted. Besides a man is known by the company he keeps. The fable of the cranes and stork, and that of the two dogs, afford useful morals, and evince the ill effect of bad company.

One of the safeguards against vicious company is not to frequent public houses. They are too often scenes of dissipation, particularly drunkenness and gambling.—To be more minute would be unnecessary, and improper. Before I conclude I cannot refrain from addressing a few remarks to parents and guardians, and it appears to be the more necessary at this time as I am well informed the vice which forms the subject of this essay, is particularly prevelent among the youth of AUGUSTA.

A most solemn charge devolves upon you in the education of those submitted to your care. It is one of the most infinite importance, and demands your utmost attention. Instilling into their minds the rudiments of learning is not more incumbent on you than planting early the seeds of virtue, that they may spring up and [illegible] forth good fruit. Upon you dependeth whether they shall be useful or worthless members of the community. Train them up in the ways of righteousness—to respect the Deity and his works; and to fulfill all the moral and social obligations. What the youth is the man will be; and I venture to say, that vicious conduct in manhood is the effect of improper education and managment in early periods of life. Rosseau has said that a 'well regulated moral institution is the surest guide to happiness.' The human mind is copposed of such materials, that they may be moulded in to any form, and I am not willing to believe that it is more prone to evil than good but on the contrary that the greater propensity we sometimes discover for the former than the latter, may be imputed to the cause just mentioned.

'Children, like oziers, easily take the bow,
And as they first are fashion'd, so they grow."

To sum up the duties of parents;—they should watch the inclination of their children and curb propensities to vice.—That they may not acquire strength with their years. 'The soil is thine own; let it not want cultivation, the seed which thou sowest, that also shalt thou reap.' And upon you it also dependeth, 'whether the child of thy bosom shall be a blessing or curse to thyself.' To teach them to obey, and to instil into their minds the principles of virtue, forms almost the sum total of your duty.

On Wednesday morning last, arrived and saluted the town, a large Spanish ship with a rich cargo from the river River la Plata, configned to a merchant in this town. We learn that she sailed in company with three others, one of which was captured by the English, the other two (we hear) have arrived at Newport.

NEW-YORK, November 4.

We are informed by captain Bush, of the Fox from St. Vincents, of the arrival of seven hundred British troops at Martinico; and that 10,000 were daily expected.

The Bakers of this city, in consequence of the regulation of the corporation respecting the assize of bread, have determined to suspend baking; and yesterday morning (without any previous notice) carried this resolution into effect. An inconvenience so serious, and so unexpected, excited general alarm; several of our wealthy citizens assembled at the Tontine Coffee House, and proposed to form an establishment under the name of "The New-York Bread Company," by a subscription; which being set on foot, the sum of 30,000 dollars were subscribed on the instant; and a meeting was called last evening to chose a committee for carrying their business into immediate operation.

At this meeting the following resolutions were adopted, and ordered to be published.—

"New-York, 3d, Nov. 1801.

"The Bakers of the city having generally refused to furnish Bread agreeably to the assize lately established by law, a number of citizens, conceiving it expedient to form an association for the purpose of guarding against the inconvenience resulting therefrom, assembled at the Tontine Coffee House, JOHN B. CHURCH, being appointed Chairman, the following resolutions were entered into:——

"1. Resolved, that an association be formed, and called THE NEW-YORK BREAD COMPANY.

"2. Resolved, That at present the Capital Stock of the said Company shall consist of 600 shares of 50 dollars each; and that JONATHAN H. LAWRENCE, DAVID DICKSON and JAMES FARLIE, be a committee to procure subscriptions for the same, and to form such rules, regulations and estimates, as in their opinion may be necessary for the establishment; and that they report the same to the subscribers, on the evening of the 16th inst. at the Tontine Coffee-House.

"3. Resolved, that the same committee be empowered to receive five dollars on each share so subscribed.

By order of the Meeting,
JOHN B. CHURCH, Chairman.
JOHN TOM, Sec'ry.

Arrived, sch'r Dispatch, Paine, St. Croix; Joseph and Louis, Bain, Windsor, (N. S.) sloop Paragon, Wainwright, Bermuda.

The ship Rufus, of New-York, capt. Holland, was spoke 17th Oct. in lat. 21, 48, long. 74, bound from Liverpool to Savannah.

Signals at one o'clock, for two brigs and two schooners.

The British Packet had not arrived at Halifax when capt. Bain left Windsor.

November 5.

Arrived, ship Lovina, Stevens, Waterford; brig Rosanna, Floger, Turk's Island; Antelope, Starbuck, Virginia; Sally, Stevens, do. sch'r Fox, Bush, St. Vincents; Rover, Clarke, Norfolk; Fanny Bridger, ——, Philadelphia; Lyon, Clarke, Virginia; sloop Hopestill, Martin, Havanna.

The ship George Barclay, arrived at Liverpool 9th Sep. The ship Howard, Reach, arrived at Liverpool from this port on the 7th Sep.

GUNPOWDER.

This wonderful compound, though it may be thought (by some) an evil, has become a necessary one especially against hostile enemies! therefore ought to be good. It is understood that great abuses are practised in the sale of gunpowder in this city and elsewhere, greatly to the public injury. The manufacture had some years ago become so extremely bad as to render it necessary to create an office of inspection for that article, and to fix a law by which that article should be sold, after previous examination and test of its power and quality. The law, however, has been suffered to be abused with impunity, whether to encourge the importation of foreign and discourage American manufacture, or to impose upon that part of the back country where powder is so much used, we cannot determine, but certainly the abuse operates as a bounty on foreign gunpowder. The sale here under the inspecton law, is regulated with perfect equity, and the purchaser can ascertain not only whether his powder has been inspected, but of what strength or proof.

The Convention of the state of New-York adjourned on Tuesday the 3d inst. sine die. Before rising they finally determined, that the number of the members of the Assembly should in futnre be 100 and never exceed 150, that the number of Senators should be permanently 32; and that by the true construction of the constitution of the state, the right of nomination is vested corcurrently in the Governor and Council of appointment.

Extract of a letter from Malaga, dated August 26.

"This year you will receive a very short supply of new fruit, as on account of quarantine, which is still in force upon all vessels from the United States, few American vessels have ventured this way."

The captain of a vessel laying at St. Jago de Cuba, writes to his owner in N. York, under date of Oct. 6, as follows:

"There has been the devil to pay here, and I came in to share the storm. Shortly after my letter to you of the 15th September, an order came on from the Governor of the Havanna to arrest the American Consul, Mr. Blakeley; to seize his property, and confine him in prison, which was put into immediate execution. This measure, it is supposed, has been adopted in consequence of reprehensions to the Spanish government, that he was engaged in carrying on an illicit trade."

A letter from Gibraltar, dated August 15, says, an attack from the French and Spaniards is expected. Spanish depredations on American property continue. Lt. Maley, who commanded the U. States' schooner Experimant is a prisoner at Algeziras. The Tripolitan Admiral has offered his vessels for sale at Gibraltar, but has been unable to dispose of them.—The governor has refused a supply of provisions to his vessels. A Tripolitan cruizer was in chase of an American ship, which it was supposed she took.

The immense and overgrown population of the Russian Empire has often been the subject of the wonder of travellers and politicians. It is not however wholly unaccountable. We learn from a late tactical writer, that before the year 1770 there were not three books in that empire upon medical subjects.

Lond. pap.

A late London paper contains the following:—"Last week, Jacob Preston, esq. was elected Mayor of Yarmouth. The ceremony of chosing the mayor is curious: Six members of the common council and six freemen of the borough, are locked up in the great hall near the church until nine are unanimous in the choice of one person. The electors were this year thirty-three hours in coming to their determination. They have however, been known to sit nine days. Neither food nor light should be admitted into the room during the election, but the parties left to watch and starve each other out."

FROM THE CONNECTICUT COURANT.

Messrs. Hudson and Goodwin,

IN a note to an Oration published by me in July last, it is asserted that Citizen Pichon, the commercial agent of Buonaparte, since his residence in the United States, has issued proposals for publishing Godwin's Political Justice. In a letter addressed by M. Pichon to Mr. Madison, Secretary of State, he declares that since his residence in this country, he has had no participation in such proposals. I wrote that note, in consequence of having frequently seen this fact declared in newspapers, and never having seen it contradicted. In the New-York Gazette of June 9th, 1801, is the following paragraph. "In the city of Washington, proposals have been published for striking off an edition of Godwin's works. The promoter of this work is Citizen Pichon. In this the public will preceive the commencement of a nother systematic effort to subvert the Christian religion, and to diffuse more widely, the demoralizing and anti-social principles of republican France." If I had the other southern papers at command, I presume the same, or a similar paragraph might be found in many of them. I gave it the same degree of credit, that is usually given to literary intelligence, contained in the common gazettes of the country. Perhaps Mr. Pichon would not have been so anxious to contradict it at this late period, if he had not heard the "Oration attributed to a Minister of Connecticut."

THEODORE DWIGHT.

Hartford, Oct. 28, 1801.

Probably the editors of those papers, in which Mr. Pichon's letter has appeared, will deem it just to insert this also.

All persons having claims against the subscriber are requested to present their accounts immediately—such as are indebted will please to make payment, in my absence, to Mr. James Keith, jun.

Nov. 10, 1801.

GENTLEMEN,

For the consideration of the inhabitants liable to pay taxes, you are requested to publish the following letter, containing the opinion of Mr. CHARLES LEE on the new tax, and oblige yours, &c.

RICHARD CONWAY.

Messrs. S. Snowden and Co.

Alexandria, 7th. Nov. 1801.

SIR,

IN consequence of your conversations I have turned my attention to the subject of the new Tax imposed by the Board of Commissioners, for the maintenance of the poor during the current year, and for commencing a fund to provide for them a permanent establishment in future.

The charitableness of the object ought not to prevent a correct view of the tax, and to me it appears to be illegal, unnecessary, arbitrary and oppressive.

Illegal, because it is neither conformable to the laws of Virginia or Maryland, and one or the other ought to furnish the rule. If the rule is furnished by the laws of Maryland, which, is my opinion, then by these no authority is given to levy a poor tax, but from year to year, for the expences of each year; or if the laws of Virginia are supposed to furnish the rule, then these do not authorise an assessment of real property and a per centage upon the amount thereof, for this purpose.

Unnecessary, because by the laws of Congress, certain fines and forfeitures in the County of Alexandria are payable to the Board of Commissioners to defray the County expences; and from this fund, I am credibly informed there is already a sum in the hands of the Marshal and Inspector of Flour, exceeding one thousand dollars, which, most probably, will be still greater at the end of the year. Heretofore less than two thousand dollars has been found sufficient for the yearly charges of the poor in the Town, and as to the other part of the County, scarcely any sum is required on this account. The new tax is calculated to raise 4,000 dollars, and as 1,000 dollars in addition to the fines and forfeitures already in the hands of the Marshal and Flour Inspector, make a greater sum than has been expended in any one year, to my knowledge, it is manifestly unnecessary to raise four thousand dollars for this object during the present year.

Arbitrary, because it proceeds from the will and pleasure of the Board of Commissioners, being neither agreeable to the laws of Congress, or of Virginia, or of Maryland, and is founded on an assessment palpably unequal and unjust. Instances of this inequality need not to be recited.

Oppressive: because it is exacted in addition to the usual taxes, and upon a new assessment considerably exceeding any former valuation of the same property, and exacted at a time when one fourth or one third of the sum would certainly have been enough for the present year, according to the best judgment I have been able to form upon the subject.

The result of these observations is that you are not bound by law to pay the tax, and if the tax gatherer proceeds in the collection, it will be at his peril.

CHARLES LEE.

To Capt. Richard Conway.

☞ THE public are respectfully informed, that the PATENT and PUBLIC MEDICINES from the house of Richard Lee and Co. Baltimore, are removed from Messrs. J. and J. D. Westcott's, to Samuel Bishop's stationary store, in Royal street, where a constant supply will in future be kept for sale.

Twenty Dollars Reward.

Strayed or stolen, but supposed to have been stolen, a sorrel Stud Horse, rising 4 years old, with a white face, and both hind feet white, no dock or brand. It is supposed the above horse was taken by James Fearon, with whom I left him about ten days ago to be cured of the glanders, as he left this town yesterday morning and the horse has not been seen since, and it is said, has gone to Norfolk. The above reward will be paid for apprehending the horse and thief (if stolen) or Ten Dollars for the horse only.
